

Guide to Hunting in Germany

German Springer Spaniel (Deutscher Wachtelhund)

Earth Dogs (Erdhunde)

In hunting Fox and Badger, the Earth Dog is send into the ground or dens to drive out the game.

Dachshund (Dackel or Teckel) and Terriers have been specially bred for generations for this work.

They are the smallest hunting dogs and are noted for their bravery and tenacity. Dachshunds and Terriers also are used for trailing wounded game and on drive hunts.

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Fox Terrier (Drahthaar Foxterrier)

Fox Terrier (Glatthaar Foxterrier)

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Hunting Terrier (Deutscher Jagdterrier)

Long Haired Dachshund (Langhaardackel)

U.S. Forces Europe Hunting, Fishing, and Sport Shooting Program

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Rough Haired Dachshund (Rauhaardackel)

Short Haired Dachshund (Kurzhaardackel)

U.S. Forces Europe Hunting, Fishing, and Sport Shooting Program

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Miniature Dachshund (Zwergdackel)

Die Dackelfamilie mit Jäger und Magd, by Adolf Eberle, 1843-1914

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Hounds (Jagende Hunde, Laufhunde)

Hounds are the oldest species of hunting dogs. They are used in packs to hunt for hare and fox and are usually kept in kennels.

Alpine Dachsbracke (Alpenländische Dachsbracke)

Westphalian Dachsbracke (Westphälische Dachsbracke)

U.S. Forces Europe Hunting, Fishing, and Sport Shooting Program

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Deutsche Bracke (Deutsche Bracke)

Deutsche Bracke (Deutsche Bracke)

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Bloodhounds (Schweißhunde)

Bloodhounds are trained to follow the blood trail of a wounded animal. They are sturdy dogs and built for endurance. This group includes such dogs as the Bayerischer Gebirgsschweißhund and the Hannoverscher Schweißhund.

Bavarian Mountain Bloodhound (Bayerischer Gebirgsschweißhund)

Hanover Bloodhound (Hannoverscher Schweißhund)

Guide to Hunting in Germany

Retrievers (Retriever)

The Labrador Retriever is an ideal, all-round hunting dog and a perfect specialist for waterfowl retrieving. Hardy and tough, with a level of understanding rarely equaled by other breeds, a Labrador can learn from a professional trainer, or from someone with less experience, although an amateur will take much longer time to achieve the same results.

Labrador Retriever (Labrador Retriever)

Guide to Hunting in Germany

The Golden Retriever combines outstanding physical appearance with many qualities that make it a favorite among hunters for waterfowl and upland-game.

Golden Retriever (Golden Retriever)

Kennel (Hundezwinger)

Minimum 6 m² of exercise area
3 m² for each additional dog in kennel
1/3 of kennel roofed to provide shade
2-compartment dog house